RECOVERY

MAT

Medication-assisted treatment is the use of medications along with behavioral therapies to reduce a person's dependence on drugs, especially opioids. Different medications are available that can help reduce the effects of withdrawal during opiate addiction treatment, as well as prevent the likelihood of relapse.

MAT (MEDICATION-ASSISTED TREATMENT)

Medication mitigates the cravings and physical symptoms of withdrawal – that’s the first step. True recovery from opioid addiction comes after detox, with a combination of medication and therapy. Our programs provide maintenance and medically supervised withdrawal that allow you to begin your recovery journey.

PROVEN BENEFITS:

- Improved patient survival rates
- Enhanced retention in treatment programs
- Enhanced ability to gain employment and stay employed
- Decreased criminal activity among those who suffer from substance abuse
